

Hey guys! I found this video on YouTube it's about Zaman story, her mother tried to protect her as much as possible and she hired a car driver to take her to and from school. So, one day it didn't show up so she decided to take the bus home, when she got off she started walking home a pick up truck pull up beside her and a group of armed men wearing hoodies jumped out of their truck and yelled at her. They asked her " why aren't you wearing your hijab? " which is a head scarf, she tried to explain to them that she doesn't wear it, but they didn't care that she is Sabi'ia and she did not wear them. As she continued walking home she were very terrify because she wasn't expecting that to happen, I honestly would be too " she never had someone put a gun in her face before " two days later they killed her friend that wasn't Sabi'ia she was Christian and didn't wear Hijab. She never went back to school and they moved to Jordan, but over there school costs so much money. Zaman's story is very touching and I really hope that she and her family left Iraq and made it to the U.S.A where she can continue her studies and be free. Education is very big for Zaman because she want a promising future before it's too late.
